When presented with the idea of hospice care, Stanwood “Stan” Myers was resistant at first. Conversations with his doctors had informed the Mount Airy resident that nothing more could medically be done for his chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, and his health was in a steady decline.

However, his initial resistance to hospice care wasn’t so much about rejecting the care and support that hospice could provide. It was about what would happen to his wife of 57 years, Dorothy “Dottie” Myers. “Something my father said stuck with me,” remembers son Doug Myers. “He said ‘I’m not afraid of dying.’ His only concern was what would happen to my mother. She kept him going.”

In July 2013, once Stan was reassured that Dottie would be cared for and it was ok for him to let go, he was ready for hospice care. “The hospice staff really took over all the responsibilities—communicating with the physicians, taking care of the medications and providing social support for my parents,” says Doug.

Stan received hospice care at home for two weeks, then his hospice nurse asked the family to consider moving him to Dove House, Carroll Hospice’s inpatient facility, for more advanced symptom management that could not be done at his home. “A few days prior to going to Dove House, my father physically started to need a lot of support, the type of support that my mother could not provide on her own. They could do a much better job of making him comfortable at Dove House,” says Doug.

At Dove House, the family gathered around Stan. “Our family loves music, and we spent much of the time singing favorite songs and hymns, being there with him and saying goodbye,” Doug remembers. Although Stan was unconscious, the staff told the family that he knew they were there for him.

He passed away on August 16, 2013—36 hours after arriving at Dove House. The Myers family was thankful for the support of the hospice team during such a difficult and emotional time. “Hospice was a huge blessing for our family. I am very grateful for the hospice staff who could handle the things our family didn’t have the experience to deal with,” Doug says. “They let us just be there for him and not have to worry about anything else.”
A Letter from the Executive Director:

We have conversations every day with our friends, family and even people we meet in the grocery store.

We discuss the weather, the latest sports game and the exciting events in our children’s and grandchildren’s lives. But have you had a conversation with your family about your end-of-life care?

A nationwide movement called The Conversation Project has been encouraging and assisting families to have that discussion about wishes for end-of-life care since 2010. The project began when award-winning author Ellen Goodwin and a group of colleagues, clergy members and medical professionals shared good and bad experiences with loved ones at the end of life.

If you want to discuss this important topic with your loved ones, but don’t know where to start, I encourage you to visit www.theconversationproject.org. There, you can learn how others have initiated this tough conversation and get some tips on what should be included in the conversation. Most importantly, though, I encourage you to have this talk with your loved ones now—before a health crisis requires decisions to be made.

In this issue of DASH, we’re sharing stories about making end-of-life decisions, Carroll Hospice’s ability to support patients and families alike during the last months of life, and the bereavement support that families receive after their loved one passes away.

Sincerely,

Diane Link, R.N.
Executive Director, Carroll Home Care and Carroll Hospice

Date Night:
Discussing End-of-Life Wishes
Wednesday, May 21, 6:30-7:30 p.m.
Carroll Hospice
Free; registration required.
Call 410-871-7205 to register.

Join Diane Link, R.N., executive director of Carroll Hospice, for a candid discussion about the importance of having your end-of-life care wishes known and ways to get the conversation started.

Let’s get the conversation started.
Talking About Hospice Care

For many people, initiating a discussion about hospice care can be difficult. “We’re a death-avoiding culture,” explains Bill Lee, a Carroll Hospice social worker. “In our culture, death is taboo.” People react in a variety of ways when it comes to talking about death. Some people shut down, but many want their wishes to be known. Some send subtle clues or messages, such as asking who wants certain possessions when they pass away, and those messages could be a good way to kick-start the conversation—if the recipient is listening and receptive.

For some, it’s helpful for a third party, such as a hospice employee or a physician, to guide or start the conversation because of his or her expertise in the subject, says Lee. No matter what the situation, Lee says it all comes down to one thing: Hospice is a choice. Ultimately, the dying process is about loss of control. Some folks realize they could benefit from hospice care, but refuse it, thinking ‘If I sign up for hospice then I’m dying,’ he says. Giving patients a choice and validating how difficult the choice can be can sometimes clear up misconceptions.

One way to start the conversation is to discuss advance directives with your loved ones before it becomes an immediate need. An advance directive is a legal document that dictates your health care wishes if you are unable to express them. Having this conversation—and having it early—is an ideal way to broach the subject of final wishes with family members.

Carroll Hospice hosts two annual camps each year that specialize in helping children work through the grief of losing a loved one.

Camp T.R. – Overnight Grief Camp
Camp T.R. is an overnight camp designed for children ages 7 through 15 who are grieving the loss of a loved one. The annual camp combines recreational activities, such as art, swimming and music, with grief education and support. The camp is staffed with professional bereavement counselors, and each camper is paired with a buddy who can provide support.

This year’s Camp T.R. takes place Friday, June 13 through Sunday, June 15. Registration is required. For more information, call 410-871-8000 or visit CarrollHospice.org/Camp-TR

Healing Hearts – Grief Day Camp
For children ages 7 through 13 who would benefit from a grief day camp, the Healing Hearts Day Camp provides a combination of activities and sharing to help them cope with their grief.

This year’s day camp will take place Friday, August 22 at Carroll Hospice’s Dove House from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Registration is required. For more information, visit CarrollHospice.org
Would You Like to Help Us, But Don’t Know How?

If you are like many people, you may be concerned about the economy and taxes this year. We appreciate your continued support of Carroll Hospice’s mission to provide quality, compassionate end-of-life care, and we want to thank you for your past generosity. We know that you would like to help us again this year, but may not know how. A charitable bequest is one idea you might consider.

A bequest is a gift you can make without using any of your current resources. It is simply a commitment made in your will to leave a future amount, asset or percentage of your estate to us. Your gift is important to us, because it will help us to continue our work into the future.

If you have already included us in your estate plan, please let us know so we can recognize you as a member of our Bridge Builders Society and we can thank you for your generous commitment. To learn more about how to create a bequest in your will or to request a free guide to creating your will or trust, please visit our website, CarrollHospitalFnd.org, or call Jenny Gambino in the Foundation at 410-871-6200.

Dr. DiMento Named New Medical Director

Carroll Hospice welcomes Johanna DiMento, M.D., as its new medical director. Dr. DiMento has practiced in the Carroll County community for nearly three years, and she has more than a decade of experience in oncology and hematology.

After earning her medical degree from New York Medical College, Dr. DiMento studied at the University of Arizona, completing both her residency in Internal Medicine and her fellowship in Hematology/Medical Oncology there. She is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine and board-certified in Medical Oncology and Hematology. As hospice’s medical director, Dr. DiMento certifies that patients are terminally ill and ready for hospice care, and she assists in the care plans of patients.
Volunteers Sought for Westminster Fallfest

Westminster Fallfest hosts four days of fun in downtown Westminster every September to benefit selected nonprofit organizations, and Carroll Hospice is pleased to announce it has once again been selected as one of the organizations, an honor it has received eight times since 1998.

Volunteers are being sought to help in Carroll Hospice’s bingo tent at Fallfest, according to Debbie Zepp, hospice’s volunteer coordinator. In previous years, about 100 volunteers have helped hospice during the festival, she said.

Funds raised at Fallfest will benefit the Carroll Hospice Endowment Fund, a fund that supports non-reimbursable expenses in hospice care, including bereavement and spiritual services, community outreach and more.

“We are blessed that Fallfest has chosen us as one of their charities,” said Zepp. “It’s been a good partnership, and we’re always happy to be a part of it.”

For more information about volunteering for Carroll Hospice at Westminster Fallfest, taking place September 25 – 28, please visit CarrollHospice.org or call 410-871-7228.

Bereavement Resources

By Jessica Roschen, M.S.
Carroll Hospice Bereavement Counselor

Carroll Hospice knows the tremendous impact the loss of a loved one or friend can have. To support hospice families and the community at large, Carroll Hospice has a number of free grief resources available to help through the grieving process.

The McGinnis Bereavement Resource Center at Dove House features more than 500 books, videos and DVDs that can be borrowed for up to a month’s time. From adult grief to caregiving to pet loss and more, the materials cover a wide range of topics.

The resource center is open to the public, so that hospice families and community members can utilize the library and check out materials. Several hospice volunteers help to maintain the library, ensuring that the books are promptly returned and the space organized.

Carroll Hospice offers up to 13 months of bereavement counseling for hospice patients’ families. These counseling sessions help families realize that the feelings they are experiencing are normal and allow them to work through and understand those feelings. Carroll Hospice also offers short-term grief counseling for community members and can provide referrals to other counseling services in the community.

In addition, Carroll Hospice hosts a variety of grief support groups at various locations in the community. These grief support groups are designed to be a safe environment where thoughts and feelings of those experiencing loss can be shared with others. All support groups are free and open to the public, and some require registration.

For more information about Carroll Hospice’s bereavement resources, please call 410-871-7656 or visit CarrollHospice.org

Please consider supporting the important work of Carroll Hospice and other community health initiatives by using the enclosed envelope to support the Campaign to Cure & Comfort, Always.
Thank you to all who supported Carroll Hospice through our annual Season to Remember event.

More than $15,000 was raised during the weeklong event, featuring 46 trees creatively decorated and donated by local businesses and individuals on display and up for bid in the Carroll Hospital Center lobby.

This year, Carroll Hospice partnered with local florists Blossom & Basket Boutique in Mount Airy and Petals Flowers & Gifts in Hampstead to sell fresh floral centerpieces, with a large percent of the sales benefiting Carroll Hospice.

A special thank you is in order for Erin Danz and Barbara Kreinar, the co-chairs of the Season to Remember committee who helped to make the event a great success!
