Introducing Specialized Hospice Care Teams

Starting this spring, Carroll Hospice is introducing specialized teams in order to continue the seamless care provided to hospice patients and their families.

Three teams have been created: one to care for patients who reside in private residences, one to care for patients who live in nursing facilities or assisted living communities, and one to care for patients who require a short-term stay at Dove House, Carroll Hospice’s inpatient facility.

With this team approach, a nurse, aide, volunteer, social worker and chaplain will be assigned to a particular nursing facility or assisted living community to build relationships between the facility staff and team.

“When the team walks through the door, the facility will know that hospice is in the building,” says Reggie Bodnar, Carroll Hospice’s executive director. “We respect how they operate, and we have processes that complement what they do in so many ways.”

One of the main reasons for this team approach is due to the difference in processes for patients who live in a facility compared to patients who live in a private residence, says Bodnar.

When a social worker is caring for a person in a private home, for example, one priority is to create a caregiving plan with the family for when the patient becomes more dependent for their personal needs. But that is not necessary when the individual is already being cared for safely in a facility. So instead, the social worker may meet with the family during evening hours or on a weekend, perhaps outside the facility setting, to support them through the challenges of experiencing a loss little by little—a common picture in patients with advanced age. The social worker might also offer educational sessions for our facility partners on this very same topic.

All patients receive the same compassionate quality care, regardless of where they live, says Bodnar, and patients and families will benefit from these dedicated teams focused on specialized and individualized care.
What a wonderful time of the year! The days are becoming longer, and spring is beginning to peek through. There is a gentle newness in the air that is contagious and invigorating.

The same might be said about Carroll Hospice. This might be the perfect time to take a peek into some of the new programs and initiatives we are poised to launch.

First, I am excited to share that, in the coming months, our team members will begin to wear attire embroidered with the Carroll Hospice logo. What a wonderful way to demonstrate how we are woven into the fabric of the community we are privileged to serve. Exceptional care is always our best advertisement, and logo wear will help identify us to those we come in contact with during the course of our respective work days.

And soon we will be launching a team specifically to care for those patients who reside in nursing facilities and assisted living communities. Collaborating with facility partners to provide the high quality of care we are known for is a bit different than the care we provide in other settings. We are eager to further define how we can best partner with our facility colleagues to provide seamless care through the end of life. Read our cover story for more details.

Finally, work has begun to establish our volunteer doula program. Doulas provide a supportive presence when a patient nears death. Learn more on page 3.

Thank you for the warm welcome that I have received my first few months here. It is a pleasure and an honor to work alongside such caring individuals, and I am excited for the opportunity to continue the quality care that Carroll Hospice provides to our community.

Sincerely,
Regina (Reggie) Shannon Bodnar, R.N., M.S., M.S.N., C.H.P.C.A.
Executive Director, Carroll Hospice
Camp T.R. helps children with grief

Camp T.R. is a FREE, overnight weekend retreat for children ages 7 through 15 who are grieving the loss of a loved one. The camp offers a safe, supportive environment to help children understand and cope with their grief.

Surrounded by peers experiencing similar emotions, campers learn that they are not alone and start to feel more comfortable sharing their feelings. Camp T.R. provides children with a safe and therapeutic environment to grieve.

Through creative honest discussions and recreational activities, campers learn positive ways to express their emotions and honor their loved one. In addition to grief education and support, daily activities may include arts and crafts, dance, music, swimming, hiking and games.

The camp takes place on the grounds of Hashawha Environmental Center in Westminster in June.

To register a child for Camp T.R. or for general information, including upcoming camp dates, call Jessica Roschen at 410-871-7656 or visit CarrollHospice.org

Please register promptly; attendance is limited to 25 campers.

New Volunteer Coordinator

Carroll Hospice is pleased to welcome Kim Benson as its new volunteer coordinator.

Benson understands the impact of volunteering, having been an active volunteer with her children’s activities for many years. She has also experienced being a caregiver to a family member and had the support of Carroll Hospice when it was time for him to seek end-of-life care. “Any time I’ve referred to Carroll Hospice since, I’ve referred to them as my angels,” says Benson.

She is enthusiastic about her new position. “I am so glad to have the opportunity to work with such a wonderful group of people, and I look forward to making great connections with such a welcoming group of volunteers,” she says.

Hospice Doula Program

Plans are currently underway to launch a volunteer hospice doula program later this year. While doulas are mainly associated with providing support during childbirth, the use of doulas at the end of life also is gaining in popularity. Hospice doulas, sometimes known as vigil volunteers, help patients during their last moments of life, providing a source of physical and emotional comfort at this important time. The new program will begin at Dove House, Carroll Hospice’s inpatient facility, later this year.

“Patients who are close to dying may not have family with them, especially if they’re coming from the emergency department or a nursing facility to the Dove House,” explains Benson. “With this program, someone will be there to provide comfort and support for the patient, and simply be there with them at this important moment.”

As is required for all hospice volunteers, training for the hospice doula program will be necessary. Visit CarrollHospice.org/volunteer for more details.

Cookbooks

Carroll Hospice reached out to its friends, staff and volunteers to compile favorite recipes for a cookbook, coming out later this spring! Learn more by contacting Kim Benson at 410-871-7228.
GILLEN AND MITCHELL Join Board of Trustees

Carroll Hospice is pleased to welcome two new members to its Board of Trustees:

Laura Gillen brings her gerontological knowledge and work experience at a life plan community to the Board. The author of scholarly articles on the application of gerontological theory, research and practice for developing optimal aging trajectories, Gillen’s work has been published in peer-reviewed journals and presented at workshops and conferences. She is a member of several honor and professional societies, and volunteers her time in the community with the Freedom District Lions Club and Foundation and the Center for the Study of Aging at McDaniel College.

A Hampstead native, Todd Mitchell is the senior vice president complex manager of the Baltimore and Westminster offices of Janney Montgomery Scott, a financial services firm. He is very active in the community, particularly in the area of veteran issues. He is the founder of Business Advocates for Veterans, a organization that assists veterans’ transition from military service to civilian life. He also dedicates time to community organizations including the Hampstead Lions Club, American Legion and the Hampstead Volunteer Fire Company. He and his wife Karen live in Hampstead and have two grown children.

Life Reviews

When the decision is made to pursue hospice care, it signals the end of a person’s life. But it is also a time to reflect and celebrate that life, a time to share memories and photos, a time to ask questions, a time to appreciate.

This process is called a life review, and it can be formal or informal, says Lorna Rice, a licensed clinical social worker with Carroll Hospice. “This is their history,” she says. “They’re more than a disease, more than a person sitting or lying in front of us at that moment in time.”

Questions to start the process could include how they met their spouse, stories about their occupation or memorable family vacations. “It’s very easy to get entrenched in this last part of a person’s life,” Rice says. “We try to get families to celebrate all the life that has come before that.”

Many times, a life review is something that happens naturally. When people make references about their life flashing before their eyes, Rice says, it’s a very real occurrence. “A life review is something people do when they’re preparing to die,” she says.

Rice recalls one hospice patient, a former truck driver, who was asleep but restless in bed. At first it looked like he was just flaying, Rice recalls. But when the family watched his movements more closely, they determined he was going through the motions of driving his truck, complete with his feet pushing the pedals. He was literally going through the motions of an important time in his life.

It’s normal for a person at the end of his or her life to discuss events and memories that happened years ago. “A life review can help validate that person’s life—that their life mattered,” Rice says, “and it’s letting other people in the family give that back to that person.”

Even if the patient is unresponsive and unable to participate in the conversation, it’s still beneficial to complete a life review for the patient and the family. Hospice staff and volunteers can help encourage these discussions. “For the family, it’s helpful to put their collective memories together to make one complete picture,” Rice says.

Families often bring in photographs to look through during this time, and Rice encourages them to tell the stories behind the photographs so that the current generation can learn about their loved one’s personal history.

Carroll Hospice welcomed Regina (Reggie) Shannon Bodnar as its new executive director in October 2015. A certified hospice and palliative care administrator, Bodnar comes to the organization with more than 30 years of experience working in hospice and palliative care, as well as oncology nursing and nursing administration.

How did you become interested in hospice and hospice care?

Early in my nursing career, I specialized in cancer nursing. This was a time when the effectiveness of cancer treatments was very different than it is today. This was also soon after the birth of hospice in this country, and a natural link between the two evolved. In the early years of hospice, greater than 90 percent of patients had a cancer diagnosis; now it is less than 40 percent.

I was enticed by the commitment to patient- and family-centered care of hospice, the clarity of communication that was at the very foundation of the work, the ability to provide care specially tailored to the patient/family’s preferences and the opportunity to collaborate with a team of professionals to provide the type of care I would want for myself or a loved one. Once I made the move, I never looked back.

Why is hospice’s mission of providing quality end-of-life care important to you?

The journey through end of life is our opportunity to accompany patients and families through what can be a very tender time. We need to appreciate it for the incredibly personal experience that it is and not so much a medical event. I have been known to say that there are no ‘do-overs’ in hospice care; we have to get it right the first time. We are helping patients finish their stories, bring relationships to a close and, most importantly, make lasting memories. Only care based on an unwavering commitment to quality can facilitate this being done well.

What is your vision for the future of Carroll Hospice?

I would like to see Carroll Hospice become the provider of choice in each of the jurisdictions we serve. We presently provide close to 80 percent of the end-of-life care provided in Carroll County. This is unprecedented elsewhere in the state. We, however, also serve Frederick and Baltimore counties. I would like to see us expand services in Carroll County and grow our presence in the other jurisdictions—and for good reason. Our quality metrics exceed both the regional and national benchmarks. Carroll Hospice provides great care that is respectful of patient and family wishes, and we would like patients and families in our neighboring counties to receive this exceptional care.

What do you hope to bring to the patients and families of Carroll Hospice?

We will continue to bring care that is provided by exceptional team members—skilled professionals and volunteers with their hearts in the right place—to the patients and families we are privileged to serve. I hope to be able to expand our relationships with community partners to ensure seamless comprehensive care and to eliminate the gaps in care that may presently exist.

The number one complaint that we receive is that patients and families wished that they had known about us earlier. Many people don’t realize that hospice is a benefit through Medicare that can extend for 6 months. I am hopeful that through the relationships and partnerships we build that we will be able to ensure families know about the end-of-life care we have to offer. I also hope to be able to feature some innovative and creative initiatives through our volunteer program. This will allow us to tailor care even more than we are capable of today.
Lafferty Named Associate of the Month

In health care, simple acts of kindness can make an enormous difference in the lives of patients and their family members. But when it involves caring for a patient nearing the end of life, these acts have an even greater impact. The actions of Carroll Hospice’s registered nurse Colleen Lafferty are a prime example. Due to her extraordinary efforts in ensuring a patient’s last days were memorable, Lafferty was honored as Carroll Hospital’s February Associate of the Month.

While providing hospice care for an individual at home, Colleen became aware of the importance of family to the patient. After the patient was transferred to Dove House, Colleen learned that one of the patient’s great-granddaughters was singing in a school talent show. Knowing the significance of this event, Colleen went to the school and recorded her performance.

Lafferty then returned to Dove House and played the recording to the patient, who responded with a touching smile. “It is the extraordinary actions like these that make our hospice nurses stand out from the rest,” said Reggie Bodnar, executive director of Carroll Hospice. “For Colleen, this is just one example of the loyal and dedicated care she provides to all her patients, which makes her highly deserving of this special recognition.”

A Season to Remember Celebration a Success

More than $11,000 was raised for Carroll Hospice at the annual Season to Remember event. The week-long celebration wrapped up on December 8, 2015 and included a range of events to honor and memorialize special people, cherished loved ones and pets during the holidays.

New this year, the Holiday Auction branched out with new items for bid and in community locations, in addition to the hospital’s main lobby, the Thomas Lobby in the hospital’s East Pavilion and Dove House.

More than 200 people bid on dozens of creatively adorned holiday trees, wreaths and centerpieces during the auction. The Memorial Tree Ceremony at Dove House to remember and honor loved ones concluded the week’s special events.

Thank you to all who took part in this cheerful and heartwarming event!
Carroll Hospice relies on support from the community to continue to provide services to those at the end of life. In calendar year 2015, more than 3,300 individuals and businesses made charitable donations supporting Carroll Hospice totaling more than $1.3 million. Private support is vital for Carroll Hospice to meet the needs of many patients and families.

Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of the list of donors. If we have inadvertently misspelled or omitted your name, please accept our apologies and contact the Hospice development office at 410-871-7220 so we may correct our records.
