Q&A with New Medical Director
And much more!
A Letter from the Executive Director

Carroll Hospice is well known for providing skilled and uniquely personal end-of-life care tailored to individual needs and preferences. What we are less known for, but of equal importance, are our efforts to ensure our patients and their families are optimally safe. We weave these tasks into our daily work and, I suspect, they are not apparent to many within our care.

- Medication reconciliation. At each and every visit, we ensure that medications are being taken as prescribed by the physician, that the patient has enough, and that if the prescription needs to be tweaked, we can advocate for that change. Of course, we provide training and education for use and safe administration of medications so that patients and family members are comfortable and confident.

- Fall prevention. Each member of the team is robustly involved in our efforts to minimize a patient’s risk for a fall. Assessing the patient’s strength and balance by the nurse, evaluating his or her ability to safely participate in activities of daily living by the hospice aide, determining the most appropriate assistive devices to support independence and providing ongoing education on how to minimize safety hazards in the home environment are all part of our standard work to reduce the risk of injury from a fall.

- In-time documentation. Technology is our friend! The prompt entry of our visit notes and assessment findings into our electronic medical record is the key to strong team communication and to patient/family safety. Each member of your care team makes certain that his or her work is readily available to colleagues who work different days and hours, so that no matter what time of the day you have a question or need assistance, we can confidently answer your inquiries and guide your care.

If you ever have a question, please never hesitate to ask. We want you to be comfortable and confident in the knowledge that Carroll Hospice is providing the best and safest care during this tender time.

Sincerely,

Reggie Shannon Bodnar, R.N., M.S., M.S.N., C.H.P.C.A.
Executive Director, Carroll Hospice
Healing After Loss

By Jessica Roschen, bereavement counselor

The healthiest way to heal from your own grief is to deal with the pain so that you can continue to have a rich and fulfilled life.

Grief literature is a helpful tool for many bereaved families. Understanding that you are not alone in your grief by relating to others who have experienced similar grief reactions can help ease the sting.

At Carroll Hospice, we often recommend books and handouts by author and grief expert, Alan Wolfelt, Ph.D. His books and articles can be found at the McGinnis Bereavement Resource Center located in Dove House.

These books by Dr. Wolfelt have been helpful for bereaved families:

• The Paradoxes of Mourning: Healing Your Grief with Three Forgotten Truths
  A reminder that it is important to welcome our natural grief and “gives you the three keys that unlock the door to hope and healing”

• The Mourners’ Book of Courage: 30 Days of Encouragement
  Follows a 30-day format of encouraging words and activities

• Healing Your Grieving Heart: 100 Practical Ideas
  Features compassionate advice and simple activities to help you through your loss

• The Understanding Your Grief Journal: Exploring the Ten Essential Touchstones
  A companion workbook to the book Understanding Your Grief designed to help explore the many facets of grief through journaling

• Loving from the Outside In, Mourning from the Inside Out
  Explores what love and grief have in common and invites the reader to mourn well in order to go on to live and love well again

Helpful grief articles by Dr. Wolfelt include:

• The Capacity to Love the Reason We Grieve

• The Spiritual Path to Healing: Mourning Ideas

• Helping Yourself Heal When Your Spouse Dies

• Helping Yourself Heal When Your Parent Dies

• Helping Yourself Heal When Your Child Dies

Dr. Wolfelt’s website (centerforloss.com/grief) also offers helpful resources for those who are grieving. Please take time to view this website and read some of his grief literature.

Because grief can be overwhelming, you may also find that talking with a grief counselor and attending a grief support group can help. Please visit CarrollHospice.org or call 410-871-8000 for more information on these and the other bereavement services we offer.

We wish you peace during your grief journey.
The simple gestures are the ones that Chris Krebs still remembers. The back rubs and gentle words from Carroll Hospice’s staff as they positioned her mother each hour. The Big Band CDs at Dove House that she was able to play for her father. The respite care that allowed her to recharge and sleep in her own bed.

For Bob and Chris Krebs, of Westminster, Carroll Hospice’s care helped to ease the pain of losing a number of loved ones over a short period of time.

Chris’ parents had been in and out of the hospital that year, and their primary care provider had suggested hospice care. Her mother was having trouble with congestive heart failure, among other health issues, and her father was stabilized at the moment but was still in failing health. He’d resisted hospice care at first, associating it with the end of life, but eventually agreed to it. “He never complained about things. He was worried about my mom, and he worried about being a burden,” she says.

About two weeks after entering home hospice care, her father took a turn for the worse and was transported to Dove House, Carroll Hospice’s inpatient facility, where he passed away a few hours later.

“I don’t have the words to describe how compassionate and caring virtual strangers to us were to my dad.”

“I don’t have the words to describe how compassionate and caring virtual strangers to us were to my dad, and when my mom came [to visit him], how they were so there for her,” Chris says of the staff. “And I think that was the big ‘a-ha’ for me. Hospice is not only for the patient, but they’re here for the family. And that’s been our experience the many times we’ve had a loved one here at Dove House.”

Supporting the Family in the Last Days of Life
Weeks after Chris’ father’s death, her good friend and her mother both passed away at Dove House. And later that year, their brother-in-law Dave was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer. Needless to say, that year was a difficult one.

So much loss in such a short period of time was overwhelming for Chris, but she was able to call on the support of the bereavement services offered through Carroll Hospice. “We would just sit and talk,” she remembers, “and to have how you’re feeling validated, to have somebody say ‘nobody can tell you that it’s time for you to move on.’ Your grief is a personal thing, and it takes time.”

About a year later, the couple was inspired to give back and became volunteers, helping in Dove House and in the We Honor Veterans program, where veteran hospice patients are honored with a presentation of a certificate, pin and salute by a military veteran volunteer.

During his time volunteering, Bob has met veterans with great memories to share, such as the one who helped set up the Distant Early Warning (DEW) line in Canada to detect incoming Soviet missiles in the 1950s.

“Some of these guys have been right in the middle of fascinating historical events,” says Bob, a Vietnam War veteran. “They were delighted to be able to talk to somebody that could relate some.”

For the Krebs, the next few years were quiet until 2014. Dave passed away, and the couple was stunned when Bob’s sister (Dave’s wife) Bev was also diagnosed with pancreatic cancer. “What are the odds?” Bob asks.

Overall, Bev’s prognosis wasn’t good. She enlisted in a clinical trial, but the cancer had progressed to the point where she needed hospice care. Even though she resided in Bel Air, Bev was able to spend her last hours at Dove House surrounded by her family.

Shortly after Bev’s passing, Bob’s mother entered hospice care. This time, hospice care was given in an assisted living facility, but the support was the same that they’d come to know over the years. She passed away nearly a year after her daughter’s death and a month after her 92nd birthday.

Through it all, the couple has been thankful for the care and support that Carroll Hospice has provided. “There are no bounds to what they would do to ensure the comfort of not only the patient, but the family,” says Chris. “They are really truly angels on Earth.”

Horn recognized as SuperStar of the Month

Carroll Hospice child life specialist Jill Horn was selected as Carroll Hospital’s December SuperStar of the Month for her extraordinary efforts to honor a hospice patient’s last wish.

When a patient was unable to attend his daughter’s high school graduation due to his failing health, Jill arranged for the principal to hold the graduation in the patient’s room.

Thanks to Jill’s efforts, and the willingness of Westminster High School Principal Jeffrey Hopkins to participate in this special graduation, the patient was able to see his daughter graduate before he died, and the family members had cherished memories to carry with them.

“Jill’s dedication to honor this patient’s dying wish is just one extraordinary example of her overwhelming compassion for patients and their family members,” said Ellen Finnerty Myers, vice president of corporate development at Carroll Hospital.

For more information on how to nominate a staff member who has demonstrated a special dedication to the job, contact Carroll Hospital’s Human Resources Department at 410-871-6833.

Q&A with
New Medical Director John Middleton, M.D.

In November 2016, Carroll Hospice welcomed John Middleton, M.D., as its new medical director.

How did you become involved in hospice care?
I have been involved in long-term and end-of-life care for my entire medical career. I have spent the last 35 years in primary care with an emphasis on long-term care and rehab services. As a result, I’ve had the opportunity to work with a variety of hospice services.

I have become increasingly frustrated with the care that our elderly and dying receive. The indignities that they suffer in their last months, years even, has caused me a personal dissatisfaction that I have strived to correct. I would say my colleagues and our population in general are, many times, unaware of alternative care other than traditional Western medicine, which emphasizes “living and beating disease” over quality, dignity and choice. Only the individual should be allowed to make this choice; our job is to help others understand and accept that choice.

Why is hospice’s mission of providing quality end-of-life care important to you?
I watched my father die of end-stage congestive heart failure. It is extremely humbling to feel so helpless, watching someone I love suffer so much. No morphine or hospice care was available at that time; the hospice movement was still in its infancy. At that time, I had no experience with hospice care. It left an indelible print on my mind—that I could and would try to bring comfort to people to the best of my ability; which also became my own personal mission. Hospice’s mission is my mission, and if I have the capability of relieving people’s distress in their time of greatest need, I have succeeded.

What do you hope to bring to the patients and families of Carroll Hospice?
It is my hope to make some small contribution in changing how the dying process is viewed, making it a condition that is not so fearful and intimidating as people currently feel—that death is to be defeated or ignored. I hope to make the public more aware that they do not have to continue with care that makes them sicker and the rest of their life miserable, that they can choose dignity and peace. It is also my hope to bring greater public awareness and encourage people to look at all options available to them. For educational purposes, I encourage my patients and their families to use the Internet to learn about the natural history of any terminal illness to validate the information, risks and benefits of those treatment options.
Hospice Staff Meets with Legislators

Executive director Reggie Bodnar and staff members met with legislators of the jurisdictions Carroll Hospice serves during a visit to Annapolis on January 31.

During the visit, they were able to share information about Carroll Hospice with Senator Delores Kelley (Baltimore County), Delegate Susan Krebs (Carroll County), Delegate Haven Shoemaker (Carroll County), Delegate Terri Hill (Baltimore and Howard counties) and Delegate Dan Morhaim (Baltimore County).

“It was an opportunity to help them understand the services we provide and the issues we face as a hospice provider in the State of Maryland,” says Bodnar. “It’s important to stay on top of the anticipated changes in health care and stay fully informed and abreast of issues that could potentially impact hospice care.”

Off to the Races with Taste of Carroll

Tickets are on sale now for the 18th annual Taste of Carroll. This year’s event, with a fun Derby theme, raises funds to support Carroll Hospice’s compassionate end-of-life care and bereavement support services.

“Taste of Carroll offers the chance to sample all types of food and beverages from restaurants and beverage vendors in the area,” says event co-chair Robbin Nolen, who has volunteered with the event since its inception. “Attendees also have the opportunity to bid on auction items, with all proceeds going to hospice care. It’s the biggest fundraiser of the year for Carroll Hospice.”

New this year is an enhanced silent auction with the addition of BidPal. This online platform allows participants to view and bid on silent auction items electronically before and during the event and immediately notifies bidders if they have been outbid on an item—all by cell phone.

“The funds received from Taste of Carroll aid in continuing the superb level of care given, not only to our patients, but also their families,” says Ann Bollinger, Carroll Hospice board member and event chair. “There are outreach programs that would not exist without the generosity of our supporters, including several support groups and Camp T.R., an overnight grief camp for children. Attending the event helps monetarily, and it also helps attendees realize the impact of Carroll Hospice while interacting with like-minded individuals.”

So, ladies, don your biggest and best Derby hat, and gentlemen, top off your brightly colored polished look with a fedora or bowler hat, as this year’s event is sure to excite all your senses!

A special thanks to our sponsors, including Presenting Sponsor BB&T and Entrée Sponsors Anchor Pharmacy, Emmert Hobbs Foundation, M&T Bank, Penguin Random House and Target Controls, for their support of this important event.

Carroll Hospice hosted another successful A Season to Remember event this past holiday season.

Because of your support:
• A total of $16,000 was raised for the quality care and services Carroll Hospice provides;
• More than 450 ornaments were purchased in honor or memory of loved ones and pets; and
• More than 50 items donated for auction from our generous community supporters.

Thank you to all who took part in this cheerful and heartwarming event! View a full list of donors and a slideshow of the creatively decorated holiday items at CarrollHospice.org/season-to-remember. The 2017 Season to Remember will take place Monday, November 27 to Tuesday, December 5, 2017.
